Everybody on this planet has a connection to God.

And there are many, many, many paths.
In all of the religions everybody is connecting to God in so many different ways.

It is all the same one God manifesting – different names, different faces, different forms, different times throughout history.

All paths lead to the same end result,
as all religions have the same common denominator:
Love of God.

they move closer to God just by her touch.
When they look in her eyes, they move closer to God
just by being able to look in her eyes.
And of course, when she speaks, every time they listen

And moving closer to God means filled with more love, more awareness, more knowledge,
more understanding about this material world –
a complex place to understand.
People are bypassing years and years of unnecessary study of scriptures. Because it's so simple after all;
simple, I know, on one hand and complex on the other.*

QUOTES OF TRUTH
ON DEVOTION, LOVE, AND GIVING

By Kalindi La Gourasana
Current-day Spiritual Master and Voice of God

I am here to help you to re-establish your eternal relationship in union with the Lord, to have no more separation between you and God, to return Home. In breaking free, you find your way to eternal life and union with God while you are alive.

The guidance that I am bringing to you, you must try to understand, and then you must apply it to your life. There is no blanket process, there is no blanket “one way” to do it, because each of you is so highly individualized. Breaking free is going to be unique for each person. What you go through and how you go about it will be different for each person, but some things will be the same for everyone.

The way to the simple teaching of “Love God, love yourself, and love each other as yourself” is through love and devotion to the Lord, God, number one. This principle of devotion to the Lord holds true no matter what path to God you follow.

God’s love is unconditional, and it is not selective or exclusive. It is not “I, me, or mine.” It is “we, we, we.” Because we are one, how can we love this one more than that one? That is a separation. So we live in the love of the One. And we dance in the dance of the One.

The love just is. It does not want for anything. Do you understand? Love just is, and it does not want for anything. It just is, and it just moves. It is fulfilled unto itself.

You must approach God in humility and in devotion.

The way that you live your life for God is in a state of devotion to God, devotion to the Lord. It needs to be understood that it is the way that you live your life for God. You never leave that state of devotion to the Lord. When you are with the Lord, it is nothing but devotion. It is nothing but love and devotion and giving.

You need to live from your love of God even though you don't know if God is there or what that love feels like. I'm talking to a part of your heart that knows devotion. When everything is said and done and you just open up, there is nothing but devotion in you.

Living in devotion and love will cause you to live a transformation with the feeling of dancing in ecstasy, of living for God in His love.

All true paths to God lead to unconditional devotional service. Your lasting and eternal connection is fed by – and lives in – this giving.

Your whole path should be an ecstatic adventure, and it stems from devotion to the Lord. It stems from laying your life at His feet, and then going through your transformation rejoicing, knowing that your transformation is happening, and giving more and more to Him.

It is in devotion, in humility, in love, and in service that you find everything. And it's in living without having expectations in return: no expectations of God and no expectations of each other.

Constantly live your life in devotion. Your relationships will change and your friendships will change when you start to live from an open heart, devoted to God.

You should be humble, not unworthy; don't mix those two things up. "Humble" does not mean unworthy; "humble" is just a state of openness that you approach God in.

Devotion, love, giving – is your true nature. Why do you keep it bottled up?

You need to offer yourself to God. Try to hear that: You need to become an offering to God. Become an offering yourself. Place yourself at the holy feet of God, like a rosebush without thorns.

As you surrender and give your life and soul to Him more and more, the flowers of the love in your heart will keep blooming and wrap around God. Eternal flowers.

As each part of you comes into God, it is another offering, another bloom, and you embrace Him more. Even though you have so many hardships and problems, the way through it all is in devotion and service to the Lord, constantly, and always standing humbly in the truth.

Stay in devotion and service until the rosebush is totally wrapped around Him, no thorns, no illusion, and He is wrapped around you, intertwined, in union, with no separation.

I know you must be afraid that if you devote yourself to God, you will lose something. You think that devotion is some kind of submissive state, or some kind of state of consciousness that will have you missing something if you live like that. But living in devotion is your natural way of being. It truly is, even though there is so much drama in your life, so many issues, and so many feelings in you.

You will only be able to achieve a state of pure devotion and giving by this consciousness of devotion to the Lord constantly. You won't do it with people; it is very conditional with people, and in your relationships. Your love and devotion must be to the Lord, and once it is firmly rooted in the Lord, then it will branch out to humankind, to friendships, and to relationships.

You have to have purely devotional, loving, giving service to the Lord, no matter how hard your spiritual transformation is.

The state of being in which you must live your life is that of love and devotion to God, even when you are having a hard time.

Even if you feel no love for Him, and you cannot feel any love from Him, you need to spend each day in loving service to God, never wavering. You are always at His feet, always. Even if you don't recognize His presence, you sit there in your heart always approaching God in devotion and love. You never leave that state of consciousness of love and devotion, no matter what.

You don't approach God hating God, even though you may have feelings of hate in you. You should just be working on releasing those feelings. The actions in your life and the way you live your life need to start to be that you live in a state of devotion and service to each other and to God.

No matter how hard your transformation is, don't walk away from the feet of God or the devotion and love in your heart. Even though you may be going through anger or hatred at God Himself, that is not really how your heart feels; those feelings are just illusions being released.

Be steadfast in your devotion. Always be calling for the Lord. Always be calling for the Lord to come to you, to have mercy, to send grace. Always sit in devotion and stay in service, forever, until you are consumed by His love.

When you are really surrendered and you are really devoted, you are receiving God in that moment, even though you can't necessarily feel Him personally. It might take ten years to feel Him personally, but so what if it takes forty years? You remain one-pointed, one-focused. If you want God, if you want to be with the Lord again, you need to capture devotion and loving service. When you capture that, and that becomes the way that you live your life, your whole life will change. When you are doing things to please the Lord, when you are serving God from devotion, your whole life will change. When you start to live from devotion and treat each other in your relationships with devotion, and you are not sitting around with constant expectations of each other, your whole life will change. Rather you are with each other to give to each other, to share love with each other, to share truth with each other, to move toward God with each other.

He will answer you. One day He will answer you, as He sees and feels that “This rosebush is embracing Me so fully, I must have it enter Me, intertwined.” God will see that your love is unconditional.

He will see that the rosebush has wrapped itself around Him, regardless of whether He gave anything back or not. Your job is to wrap yourself around God. He is standing there with full love waiting for you to do that. His fullness will shower you with the endless love that you have been searching for.

For you to have all of God's love, you must give all of yours, consistently and unconditionally. God is constantly standing there, wanting to give you everything all of the time. He is consistent. He is just waiting until you decide to become united with Him again.

If you just offer a rose once a month, and then you run away from God into the illusion, seeking pleasure, separate from your love and devotion to God, who is your lover, then? He can't force you to stay. The devotion that I am talking about is not for you to just offer a rose once in a while. Love cannot be forced; it is given, and it is given consistently. And it is God that you have to focus on; it is the Lord that your love has to be given to. When you give yourself fully forever, then you will find the eternal love.

Live your days in devotion to God. Have God first in your heart; God is number one. Your quest for Him is your priority, and in that devotion, you will automatically carry a state of devotion into your life to all the people that you touch.

The key is that you have to be living in devotion to God. You know what devotion is, and you fear devotion because you fear surrender. You think if you are devoted, then you will be giving up your power somehow. But I tell you, it is in devotion, in living without expectation, in humility, and in love and in service that you find everything.

Once you are rooted in your devotion to God, and it is unwavering, you will start to carry that in your life; and it is a love and a giving that is real and true. You will learn to love everyone the way that you love God. It will be God's love starting to come through you.

Even before you feel God's love for you, you live in your love and devotion for God, and that is what will draw Him ever closer to you – that you are just coming closer every day.

Whether He answers or not isn't the issue. The issue is, "Are you giving to God?"

He is waiting right here, right now, for your heart to be His, for your heart to return into His. But you turn away constantly. You offer a rose with some thorns on it.

When you offer a rose once in a while, in some act of devotion, do you think to take the thorns off the rose because it is into the Lord's hands that you put that rose?

You are like a rosebush at God's feet, full of thorns. Your whole spiritual transformation is about all the thorns of illusion falling off, one by one, until you are fully embraced, intertwined with Him – with no thorns.

Don't take this teaching of devotion and then turn it into some mushy, airy-fairy, nonsensical, unreal way of being. I'm not asking you to muster up an unreal state. I am just speaking straight to your heart and to your soul.

You might be a kind-hearted and giving person, but you give when it suits you; you give if there is something in it for you. That giving allows your ego to feel like you are a kind and loving person, and you are happy to see the other person happy. Your ego would love to feel that it is kind and loving and charitable, but it's still the ego that is giving.

Don't wait for ten years to then be devoted. Find that place of devotion in your heart now, even though you have a hardness around your heart. Find a deeper place anyway, and approach your spiritual quest, your spiritual path, your spiritual life, your journey to God from a devoted place. Wake up! You are an inch away from His embrace. How could you be living in any other way than in devotion?

Giving to God directly, being in devotion and surrendered to the Lord, will bring you to automatically treat each other with love and devotion.

Give your whole being in devotion to God, and then if you see that you are on a path that is no longer bringing you growth, then, of course, you have to move to a path that will bring you the growth that your soul is searching for.

If you find a path that is taking you Home and you know that, and you find that doorway Home, you have to immediately, in humility, become that rosebush that is at His feet, and never, ever leave. You have to wait there, and you have to keep letting flowers bloom all around Him, touching Him, reaching for Him, trying to offer some part of yourself to God. He will answer, and you will become God-like; you will become as God is, full of His love and presence, never separate from Him again.

You don't have much time, believe me; the house is burning down. If you do not learn to live in devotion, love, and giving to God, you will spend your time wondering when and if you will surrender. You will go to your deathbed wondering when and if you are going to surrender. That is not the way to approach your surrender to God.

The way to approach surrender to God is to live in devotion, to give in devotion, to love in devotion, to surrender in devotion; and you do all of that while you travel the path Home.

You never turn your back on God, not if you desire union in this lifetime, not if that little seed of desire for God's full loving embrace once again has flowered. Once that seed opens up, you never turn your back. You live in service; you live in devotion for the Lord. You live to serve Him and His purpose.

There is nothing that God wants more than for you to return to Him, to His full, loving embrace, and for you then to help others to return to Him. That is what God wants for everyone. You have to melt your heart with a conscious decision to “lay your life at God's feet” in devotion.

You will learn to run with tears, into Him. You will learn to scream into the fear with courage. And you will know how to live your life every day in devotion and in love.

When you are giving from your true nature, the giving is selfless, unconditional; you are selfless and unconditional in your relationship to God and to yourself. In that natural state, you will share the love of God with others.

Don't be complacent until you are carried away and filled by the presence of the Lord.

Live your life in devotion to God twenty-four hours a day, and you will see a big difference in how you relate with people and in how you relate to your transformation. You will see a very big difference in how fast God reciprocates with you. It doesn't come out of your expectation, because there is none. That is how He reciprocates with you so quickly, because you just live to serve. You live to give from your devoted heart to God.

You need to learn how to situate yourself in the deepest part of your heart. You need to constantly drop to the deepest part of your heart, and from there you live your life and you transform and you share the love of God, you receive the love of God, you share love with one another from the deepest part of your heart. And what is in the deepest part of your heart is your soul, and your soul is love.

Always, always, always be an offering to the Lord.

Search for ways to give directly to the Lord. To give yourself completely to Him, personally, is your heart's deepest desire.

You need to find a way to live in your heart every day in direct devotion to the Lord, giving to what and to whom He wants you to give. Otherwise it is your ego picking and choosing whatever way feels best to give, and then it is just all about self-serving purposes, even though you are doing something that appears to be humanitarian, appears to be giving to the world. That is all wonderful, and that kind of giving will only increase as pure love is there. However, I am talking to those of you who want to break free in this lifetime, who are striving for an eternal relationship with the Lord, to be one again with God. Giving and living in devotion is the way to true love with one another, but you have got to find your way into the true love of God, and it starts from you offering yourself to Him. You offer yourself to God, and you never walk away from doing that. Don't let the complexities of life interfere with the place in your heart that is a complete offering to the Lord and is the reason you live. You deal with the complexities, you do the GMP*, you get through your transformation, and you live to serve – in devotion, in love – the Lord. That is how you have to live your life every day.

* GMP – Gouvasana Meditation Practice®

You have to live in devotion to God, in loving service to God, even while you are not fully surrendered. Doing this is what will carry you in your transformation, and eventually, bit by bit, all the thorns will fall off, and you will be fully surrendered. Then you will live in devotion, and you will be the embodiment of love and devotion that is God.

Without giving, there is no way for the light to get in and move through you and have an outlet.

Your giving has to be from a place of devotion and humility, that you are giving for the other person's pleasure. You are giving for God's pleasure; you are not giving for your own satisfaction. Your true satisfaction comes when you are able to please the Lord, when you feel your heart just open and giving, and when you are giving to others and you see their pleasure.

Once you have reached that state where you are totally surrendered to God, you want to do as much as you possibly can, and that is what gives you the pleasure. That is where the satisfaction comes from: in doing as much as you possibly can.

When you give from your heart with no expectation but because you want to give and serve, you will be acknowledged through your own heart. The reciprocation comes from God, and you have to give up even the idea that you want reciprocation from God. You have to want nothing other than to give of yourself.

Want God, love God, with your entire heart, all of your heart.
Want God, love God, serve God, with all of your heart.

Give love. Do not hold on to it; let it flow. God's love cannot be owned or grabbed up. It is for everyone. It is from God, to share and to give.

God's love is for everyone, equally. There is but one God, loving all.

What happens when you love God and love yourself as God loves you? You love each other.

If what you want is to help in this world, the way to do it is to break free from the illusion and to return to pure love of God: selfless, unconditional. So either way you go, if you want to help in this world or if you want to break free, the way is to transform out of the illusion back to pure love. And your desire will either take you back to the realm of spirit at the time of your death because you're done here and you have finished up your business, or will help you evolve and bring more love to the world – and you will take yet another birth. In the grand drama of material existence, you will pick up where you left off.

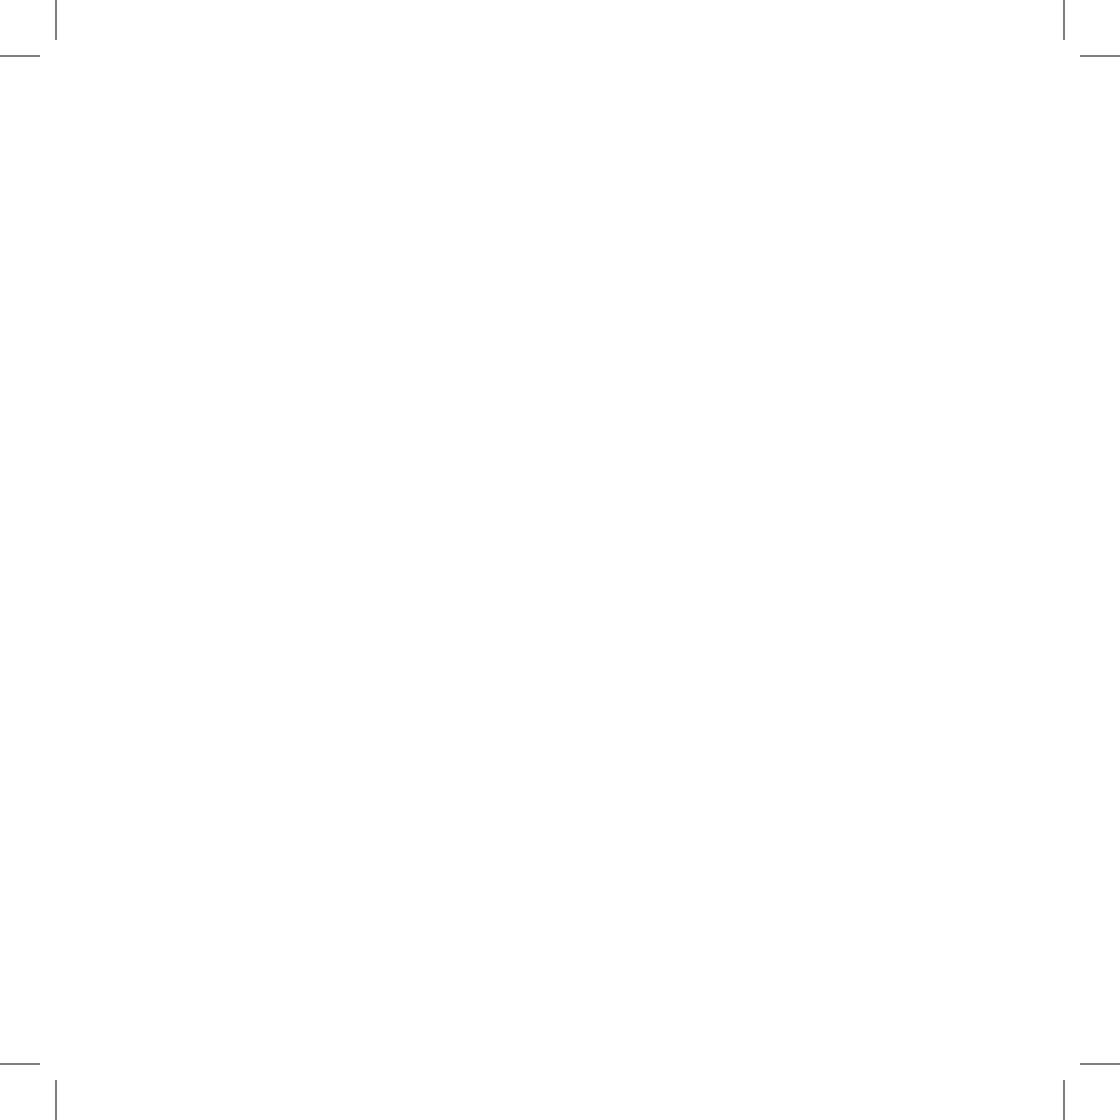

God's love is so incredible and unconditional and selfless. It lives to give. So the love that's going to come in through the people that transform back to God through this world is going to be very great – very much compassion. But it's going to also be the truth, and the truth is, this material world is not your home, and you cannot find your endless love or your true nature by hanging on to the illusion in any way. You have to become detached from the illusion in every way – let it go – in order to find your home with God.

Be Home again. Come Home now. If that is your desire, the help is here now. At the least, you do not have to live without the full connection to God and God's love anymore. You can connect again to your lost love with God. And you can increase that love every day. And you can get freer and freer every single day of the rest of your life and serve the Lord.
